The targeted applications are potentially unwanted programs, malware, badware, and adware extensions that cause advertisements or other unwanted actions to appear in Chrome. Using the Chrome Cleanup Tool is very easy. Simply download it, run it, and let it scan your computer for unwanted programs. If it detects any unwanted programs, it will alert you and wait for you to remove them. Once the programs are removed, it will reset Google back to its default settings. It is important to note that after the Chrome Cleanup Tool has finished running and you close the program, it will automatically delete itself. So do not be surprised if you run it once, but are unable to find it again when you attempt to run it at a later date. A quick way to get to Chrome settings is by entering chrome://settings in the address bar. For Macs, use Applications folder in Finder and move unwanted apps to the trash. This article explains how to use the Cleanup Tool in Google Chrome. Instructions apply to the Google Chrome web browser for Windows-based operating systems. Check for and remove any unwanted programs if you experience undesirable symptoms such as: Intrusive pop-up ads and unexpected web pages appear. The search engine or homepage redirects to services or sites you don't recognize. General slowness in the browser. The Chrome Cleanup tool periodically checks for suspicious programs. It lets you know when something untoward is discovered and offers the option to remove it. You can manually check for these problem programs by taking the following steps: Open Chrome, select the three dots in the upper-right corner, then select Settings. You can also access the Chrome settings by entering chrome://settings in the address bar. Scroll to the bottom of the page, then select Advanced. Scroll down to the Reset and clean up section, then select Clean up computer. Select Find. You should see a message that reads, "Checking for harmful software." This process can take several minutes to complete. If any suspicious programs are found, you have the option to remove those programs. Chrome also disables any harmful extensions. Chrome for macOS doesn't offer the Cleanup tool feature. However, you can remove unwanted programs from your Mac manually by navigating to the Applications folder in Finder and moving unwanted programs to the trash. Use caution and don't remove applications that you may need. Also consider disabling extensions, either one at a time or all at once. Third-party add-ons are often the cause of problems with a browser. If removing unwanted programs didn't solve the problem, reset the browser settings to the default state: Open Chrome, select the three dots in the upper-right corner, then select Settings. Scroll to the bottom of the page, then select Advanced. Scroll to the Reset settings section and select Reset settings to their original defaults. Select Reset settings to restore the Chrome settings to the default values. Bookmarks, search history, and saved passwords aren't affected. Thanks for letting us know! Tell us why!
